

Dillon and Weinert Should Fur nish Interesting Session at Garden To-Night.

ACK DILLON and Churley Weinert should put up one of most interesting beavy. weight fights of the season. One hing that adds to the interest is fact that they met once before Dillot stopped Weinert in that fight Weinert has crown both in physique and in exest heavyweights in this part of the ountry, and bas done very well. His caploit was the outpointing of Sim Savage in a ten round bout at the Garden. This was a corking fight the way. Weinert showed a world confidence, in spite of the fact that ge had just beaten A. Reich and ad shown a lot of first class fighting as they are to-day may be had by comparing their recent fights with a wage. Both had an edge on the ersey champion. Weinert out-binied him, but without ever having avage in danger of a knockout. Dilla knocked Savage down several ness, and it was only Jim's splendid outeration and genuine gameness at brought him to his feet and ended him to stick it out to the end the ten rounds. But Savage made better finish against Dillon than minist Weinert, for in the last two three rounds he was outfighting in friend Jack, who was armweary and unable to land another of his ard knockdown blovs. In speed and dil Weinert is at least Dillon's equal. It is advantage in beight, range at weight. But Dillon is the more gressive fighter of the two, and by pothe store dangerous hitter. emparing their recent fights with Hoffman was with the Cubs under contract of Feb. 23, 1911, which provided for a salary of $5,000 at year. On May 29, 1912, he was notified by telegram that he had been transferred to Pittsburgh and that the Pittsburgh club would be responsible for the salary.

The evidence showed that during the remainder of the season Hoffman received $697 from the Pittsburgh Club and that he did not enter into any contract with it, relying upon the telegram from the Chicago club.
